HPS Executed A Grasstops Digital Campaign To Drive Action On Budget Priorities

Situation

President Donald Trump's first budget proposal dramatically slashed foreign aid and development assistance, a crucial diplomatic and humanitarian tool for the U.S. government and NGOs.

HPS was retained by the ONE Campaign and a coalition of international development groups (Investing for America) to develop and launch a grasstops digital campaign that encouraged local constituents to call or email their member of Congress and advocate for the importance of foreign aid.

Our Approach

HPS developed a campaign designed to focus resources on a targeted set of members, both while they were in D.C. and back in their districts over the summer recess.

- Targeted digital campaign: Zipcode-level digital targeting across multiple platforms, paired with compelling calls-to-action and message testing and optimization
- Patch-through call program: Daily activation of unique constituents in target states and districts, including preparation with key facts and messages

Impact

Ultimately, members of the House and Senate Appropriations Committees declined to take up the president's budget, and appropriated a satisfactory amount for the fiscal year.

The digital campaign, complemented by government relations efforts, generated significant interest in districts and in D.C. over a two-month period, including:

- 11,011 calls to members of Congress
- 4.7 million impressions on digital ads
- 29,914 clicks to the coalition website
- 36,121 engagements with coalition social content
